FROM THE PRESIDENT

Dear Colleagues,

I recently overheard two lawyers talking in an elevator in downtown Charleston. One said to the other: "I don't know what is the matter with new lawyers these days. They don't care about anybody but themselves. We'll never have anybody like Sol Blatt or Ruth Cupp again."

I hated to interupt, but I did.

No, we will never have anyone like Judge Blatt or Ms. Cupp—they were one of a kind—but we have others here in Charleston whose deeds and reputations will last beyond their lifetime. These young lawyers may not yet have had enough time to make the deep and lasting marks of those that came before them, but rest assured that they will. They already travel down the path toward lasting greatness.

Each generation has different values and aspirations, but like always, we have a core group here who want to be the best they can be in the profession, give back to the community, and make a difference. But they have obstacles. Gone are the days when young lawyers learned their trial and transactional skills from the older, experienced attorneys who gathered at Byars Drug Store on Broad Street every morning at 10:00 for coffee. At Byars, young lawyers could ask older lawyers about their cases, seek advice on tricky evidence questions, learn the written and unwritten rules, and absorb wisdom on the general practice of law. Today, with thousands of lawyers practicing all over the Lowcountry, young lawyers do not have the same one-on-one opportunities as the leaders who came before us.

Recognizing these obstacles, Judge Michael Duffy and lawyer Charlie Goldberg started a program called "Bridging Broad Street," held every month at the federal courthouse for all young lawyers in town. Here, more senior lawyers speak on any topic they think may be helpful to the group and field questions and offer assistance to anyone who wants it. The younger lawyers form bonds among themselves, meet the judges and speakers who attend, and are encouraged to ask questions and offer ideas. This program has now spread to other courthouses around the state, but we are confident that the original is still the greatest.

To my new friends from the elevator and to anyone else who doubts the young generation of lawyers presently making their way up the ladder, please look around at who we have in Charleston today. We could fill an entire issue of the newsletter with their accomplishments. For the time being, however, I would like to mention a few of the many, many young lawyers who are making a difference. On top of a crushing workload, these young, dynamic attorneys give generously to the community, their families, and our profession:

- Leading the charge in helping the indigent solve their legal problems inside and outside of the courts are Alissa Lietzow and Mary Vosburgh. Alissa is Executive Director of Charleston Pro Bono Legal Services, is a graduate of the South Carolina Bar's Leadership Academy, and is also Secretary of the Petigru Inn of Court. Mary is staff attorney at the Homeless Justice Project, One80 Place and also actively serves on the Executive Committee at the CCBA. They make our community so much stronger by giving access to justice for those who otherwise would have no representation.
- Thomas Limehouse serves as legal counsel to the Governor of South Carolina, a position he is taking only a few years after serving as Editor in Chief of the South Carolina Law Review, then as a federal judicial law clerk with Judge Michael Duffy, followed by private practice at Duffy & Young. Thomas did a lot of the groundwork to get Bridging Broad Street off the ground, and he has also served as an adjunct faculty member at the Charleston School of Law, as Ninth Circuit Representative to the SC Bar's Young Lawyers Division, and on the Charleston USC Alumni Board.
- Peter McCoy, an experienced trial lawyer and partner at McCoy & Stokes, has been a member of the South

Carolina House of Representatives since 2011—where he serves as Chairman of the House Utility Ratepayer Protection Committee—and is one of the top two contenders for the next US Attorney for South Carolina. Among his other professional and community activities, Peter has served as president of the Charleston Lawyers Club and on the Advisory Board of the Save the Morris Island Lighthouse and has been awarded the Key to the Town of James Island.

- Sally Newman, a former law clerk to Judge Richard M. Gergel, founded Charleston Legal Access, Charleston's first sliding-scale non-profit law firm, when she saw a need to represent the many people in our community who are not eligible for free legal aid but who cannot afford a private lawyer. Sally and another young star—Adair Boroughs, Executive Director of Charleston Legal Access—have given their hearts and souls to helping a segment of our community which would otherwise not be able to afford legal services needed to navigate the legal system.
- Ryan Neville, a lawyer at Stevens and Lee, served as an adjunct professor at the Charleston School of Law, where he was named "Adjunct Professor of the Year" in 2014-15. In 2017, he was selected to receive the American Bar Association's "On the Rise - Top 40 Young Lawyers" award. He also was recognized as the "South Carolina Young Lawyer of the Year" by the South Carolina Bar in 2012-13. His community work is equally outstanding: founding a partnership with Make-A-Wish South Carolina; assisting in the implementation of disaster legal services to over 550 South Carolina families during the 1,000 year flood in October of 2015 and Hurricane Matthew the following year; drafting wills for fire fighters, police officers, and Habitat for Humanity; preparing tax returns for low-income families; and providing legal services to the homeless.
- Margie Pizarro, founding partner at Pizarro Law Firm, is a former school teacher who attended law school as a single mother. She has recently published a book about her life journey so far: How I Got From There to Here. Since graduating from law school ten years ago, Margie has applied her drive to helping others. Her professional and community accomplishments are too many to list, but her are a few: CCBA Executive Committee member; member of the Petigru Inn of Court; Planning Commissioner for the Town of Summerville; member of the Board of Visitors for Columbia College; member of the Board of Directors for the Dorchester County Habitat for Humanity, YES Carolina, youth entrepreneurship program, Children's Museum of the Lowcountry; host of the local television show Lowcountry Spotlight; and fashion icon.
- Tommy Preston is Director of National Strategy & Engagement at The Boeing Company. He is Chair-Elect of the American Bar Association Young Lawyers Division, a national organization of more than 150,000 members and 300 affiliated groups. At his young age, his resume is a litany of "firsts." He served as the Student Body

President of the University of South Carolina, and as an undergraduate student, he founded Cocky's Reading Express, which has grown into a statewide program to promote childhood literacy. He is currently the youngest and first African American president of the My Carolina Alumni Association and was formerly the youngest and first African American chair of the USC Board of Visitors. He sits ex officio on the USC Board of Trustees. His statewide campaign to inspire the next generation of workers was recently featured in the Post and Courier.

- John Robinson, a member of the first graduating class at the Charleston School of Law, is already a Renaissance Man at an early age: trial lawyer at McDowell & Robinson, the South Carolina Bar's Pro Bono Lawyer of the Year, member of the Charleston County Board of Assessment Appeals, vice-chair of Charleston Pro Bono Legal Services, former member of the CCBA, and active member and past president of his law school alumni board.
- Mallary Scheer founded her own law firm and also serves as the Youth Justice Advocate with the ACLU. She also serves as a Board Member for both the Family Self Sufficiency Program, a program focused on addressing the needs of low-income families, and for Charleston Legal Access, a nonprofit dedicated to providing reduced-rate legal services for working poor individuals. She founded the CCBA's social security committee and serves as co-chair of the super-active Outreach Committee, along with Judge Paul Garfinkel, who describes her as "truly a shining star in our legal constellation."
- Patrick Wooten at Nelson Mullins is a constant inspiration. He works hard at his job and actively gives back to the profession and community he loves. Past President of the SC Bar Young Lawyers Division, Board member for Charleston Legal Access and USC Moore School of Business Alumni Board, graduate of Leadership Charleston and Riley Institute Diversity Leaders Initiative, member of the American Bar Foundation Fellowship and Petigru Inn of Court, and winner of the SC Bar Young Lawyers Division President's Award are but a few of the many ways he is involved and leading our profession.

In case you may be thinking that young lawyers today are not experienced in courtroom work, think of David Aylor, Britt Kelly, Nosi Ralephata, Johnny Stewart, and Nickisha Woodward, to name but a few of our young lawyers who know their way around a courtroom and contribute to the profession and the community.

Making A Difference: Mentors

Following the lead of Judge Duffy and Charlie Goldberg, experienced attorneys of all ages can contribute to the education and guidance of young lawyers in Charleston. The Charleston County Bar Association is seeking mentors for students at the Charleston School of Law—setting them on the right path before they graduate—and for young lawyers who are outside of the SC Bar's Mentor program for first-year lawyers.

We ask you to please contact one of the following and volunteer to serve as a mentor:

- Sean Houseal (partner at Womble Bond Dickinson), chair of CCBA's Mentor Committee: sean.houseal@wbd-us.com
- Perry MacLennan (associate at Haynsworth Sinkler Boyd), another young star, chair of the CCBA's Engagement Committee: pmaclennan@hsblawfirm.com
- Debra Gammons (professor at the Charleston School of Law): dgammons@charlestonlaw.edu

I promise this, based on personal experience: you will receive as much as you give while serving as a mentor. And you will change your mentee's life.

Very truly yours,

Scott Moïse

JUDGE CURRY ELECTED PRESIDENT OF NATIONAL COLLEGE OF PROBATE JUDGES

The Honorable Tamara C. Curry was inducted as the president of the National College of Probate Judges (NCPJ) in Ponte Vedra, Florida on November 17, 2017. Judge Curry is the first African-American president for the organization which was organized in 1968 to improve the administration of justice in courts with jurisdiction over decedents' estates, guardianships and trusts. The National College of Probate Judges was established in response to concern with the time and costs involved in estate administration. It is the only national organization dedicated exclusively to improving probate law and probate courts.

Judge Curry was born and reared in Charleston. She earned a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Political Science from South Carolina State University and a Doctorate of Jurisprudence from the University of Tennessee College of Law in 1988. She was admitted to practice law in Ohio in 1988 and South Carolina in 1992.

She was appointed as Associate Probate Judge for Charleston County in 1998. Judge Curry also presides as one of the judges for the Charleston County Adult Drug Court and in 2003 started the first Mental Health Court in the State of South Carolina. She was appointed to serve as one of the presiding judges for the Charleston County Juvenile Drug Court in 2010.

Judge Curry is involved in the following activities and organizations: Board of Trustees Allen University; Past Editor of the National College of Probate Judges Journal; Board Member YWCA of Greater Charleston;

Task Force on the Revision of the National Probate Court Standards, 2013; South Carolina Association of Probate Judges; Charleston (SC) Chapter of The Links Incorporated. Past President, Charleston Mental Health Center – Advisory Board Mental Health for Heroes; Center for Heirs Property Preservation-Board Member; South Carolina Bar Association; Charleston County Bar Association; National Bar Association; South Carolina Black Lawyers Association; South Carolina Women Lawyers Association and Alpha Kappa Alpha, Sorority, Inc.

She is married to Judicial Council Member, Reverend Eduardo K. Curry, Esquire, and they have, three children, Eduardo II, Morgan and Xavier, a daughter-in-law, Jennifer and grandmother to Olivia. She is also a faithful member of Chavis African Methodist Episcopal Church, in Hemmingway, South Carolina.

The Charleston County Bar Association Congratulates Judge Curry on her induction as President of the NCPJ.

ABOUT NCPJ

The National College of Probate Judges ("NCPJ"), organized in 1968, is the only national organization exclusively dedicated to improving probate law and probate courts. "Probate jurisdiction" varies from state to state. However, generally, all probate courts handle cases involving the estates of deceased persons, adult guardianship and protective proceedings, and mental health and addictive disease treatment, and matters concerning developmentally disabled persons. In some states, probate courts handle adoptions, certain juvenile matters, and/or guardianship and conservatorship of minors.

Probate jurisdiction is exercised exclusively or partly in separate probate courts in seventeen (17) states. In the remaining thirty-three (33) states and the District of Columbia, probate jurisdiction is exercised in the general jurisdiction trial courts by assignment or rotation among the judges in multi-judge districts or circuits.

Our Mission Statement and Goals:

The major purposes of the College are:

- To promote efficient, fair and just judicial administration in the probate courts, and
- To provide opportunities for continuing judicial education for probate judges and related personnel. These twin purposes are accomplished through a number of national and regional programs and projects, including conferences, publications and other materials, and their Website.

Executive Director of (Charleston) Pro Bono Legal Services, Inc.

What a year 2017 has been for CPBLS! From celebrating legal milestones, to countless outreach and educational seminars – from sold out fundraising events to cheering the addition of a second full time attorney – it'll be one to remember. Here's a brief look back at the 2017 highlights.

This past year marked fifty years of civil legal aid in this community - dating back to the incorporation of Neighborhood Legal Assistance Program in 1967. On July 11, 2017 in recognition of our 50 years of service, City of Mayor Tecklenburg Charleston John issued proclamation declaring July 19, 2017 as Pro Bono Legal Services Day! It also marked the beginning of Charleston Pro Bono's 50-for-50 Campaign with the goal of raising $50,000 in celebration of providing 50 years of service to the Charleston community. Over the past 50 years, we have helped thousands of people with a diverse array of legal issues such as keeping families together, defending tenants and preventing evictions, and preserving final wishes. In the first five months of the campaign, we achieved 57% of our goal, raising $28,654.00. We hope you'll help us in reaching our goal in the coming months.

We also completed an incredibly successful year in outreach and educational seminars for both the general public and legal community alike. We continued our work with community partners like East Cooper Community Outreach, Habitat for Humanity, Next Steps, and Ansonborough House, in addition to forging new relationships with Father to Father and SC Strong. During the year, we provided over three dozen outreach programs to our allies for good covering topics such as family, housing, and immigration law positively impacting hundreds of low-income residents in our community.

Maintaining our dedication to instilling an ethos of public service to the up and coming generation of lawyers, our team hosted the eleventh annual Ackerman Fellowship Program, made possible by grants from the Ackerman and Yaschik Foundations. Eight law students from around the country participated in two 6-week immersive legal fellowships. These students conducted client intake, eligibility determination, fact-gathering, and assisted in preparation of pro se pleadings. They also helped us at various community events and clinics such as City of Charleston's Homeless Taskforce meetings, Community Resource Day hosted by the Charleston Housing Authority, and worked with clients from the Ryan White Wellness Center and Our Lady of Mercy. In addition to the Ackerman Fellows, volunteers donated nearly 2,200 hours of their time at our office meeting with clients, conducting research, and preparing case files!

Charleston Pro Bono held two very successful fundraising events this past year. First was our Valentine's Day online auction in February, made possible by our generous community – both the local businesses that donated items and the legal community who purchased them. In November, we hosted the 18th annual Art on the Beach – Chefs in the Kitchen home tour/art walk/food tasting on Sullivan's Island. In the third year the event benefited our organization we were thrilled it sold out while realizing record-breaking figures! A special thank you to the Charleston County Bar Association members who supported us – you helped secure homes, sponsors, volunteers, and patrons!

Finally, this past year focused on renewed efforts for addressing the issue of access to affordable housing and playing a role in effectively ending homelessness. The most impactful event related to these issues was the addition of a full time housing attorney in late Fall thanks to a grant award from the South Carolina Bar Foundation. Attorney Paluzzi focuses on providing educational clinics on tenant rights, offering advice and counsel in collaboration with community partners, and providing direct representation on legally meritorious claims. In her short time serving in this capacity, she's already successfully resolved 28 cases – assisting those most of whom would otherwise have been completely lost in the judicial system without an attorney's help.

Looking ahead, we are striving to strengthen our efforts to make a lasting impact. But we simply cannot do it without you. We need volunteer attorneys to accept cases currently waiting for a pro bono attorney. Alternatively, consider assisting with a clinic, teaching a seminar, or simply donating. No matter your area of practice or level of experience, we have opportunities for you. How about just one more 2018 New Year's Resolution? Find a way to be of service to your local community through CPBLS!
